AN ERUDITE ECHO.

It Spoke One Language for Twenty Years, Then Changed.

In the course of last summer, says the Boston Globe, some strangers distinction were induced to visit a wild and unfrequented retreat in a distant part of the Highlands, chiefly from the report they heard of an echo which was remarkable for the clear and distinct nature of its reverberation.

On reaching the spot whence the trial of its powers is usually made, their guide put his hands to the side of his mouth and bawled out, with the lungs of a Stentor, a salutation in Gaelie, which was repeated with a precision that seemed beyond the expectations of the party.

One of the gentlemen, by way of try-ing the strength of his voice, put his hand to his mouth in the same manner as the guide and called out:

"How far are we from home?"

These words, much to the surprise of their guide, were also repeated, when poor Donald, with a simplicity that brought a smile over the faces of all present, exclaimed:

"You may think it is strange, gentle-men, but this is the first time I ever heard our echo speak English."

"I have no doubt," said the gentle-man, "butit can repeat other languages if you put it to the test," and instantly he bawled out some brief questions in French, Spanish and Italian.

Donald looked more dazed than ever.

"Well, I must say that's very queer. My own father and my own self have known that echo for more than seventy years and we never knew it to use any

"Your echo is more learned then than you supposed," said the gentleman, laughing, though at a loss whether to impute Donald's remarks to archness or simplicity. simplicity.

"You may say that, sir," said the poor rou may say that, sir, said the poor fellow, with an expression of earnest-ness that was highly amusing to those present; "but, as the echo has never been out of the country, where can she have got all her education?"

ACITY OF PIE EATERS.

Bostonians Follow the Customs of Their Ancestors in One Particular.

New England has often been referred to as the pie-eating district of the country, says George R. Bliss, restaurateur, of Boston, in the St. Louis Globe-Demo-1 remember that Emerson was quoted once as having asked the ques-tion: "What was pie made for, if it wasn't to eat?" There never has been any other section of the country where pie was said to have been so universally and expensively consumed as part of the early morning meal as New England, although it is reported now that New York is one of the greatest pie and cake-eating localities. As a mat-ter of fact, New England not only deserves all that has been said of her capacity for pie, but it is generally known that the consumption of pie is greatly on the increase there, and in Poston the pie-eaters are multiplying very rapidly.

There is one man on Washington street, right in the midst of half a dozen big restaurants with being testaurants with being testaurants.

big restaurants with brisk trades, who has made a barrel of money out of the pie and cake industry only, and there every day there are a thousand pies caten in the two or three hours between ten o'clock in the morning and two o'clock in the afternoon. Just think of it! Λ thousand pies means four thousand pie eaters, and this estimate is conservative. There are hundreds of men who occupy good positions down in the commercial and financial districts of the city go to this place every day for the noon-day repast of a glass of milk and a piece of pie, and they are all healthy and hearty.

KISSING THE BABY.

A Study of Life Which Conveys a Valu-

There was a typical bit of life shown in a recent incident in a Brooklyn street car, says the New York Times. Two fashionably dressed women, strangers to one another, and each with a child on her lap, found themselves seatmates in a crowded car. The handsome blue-eyed boy on one knee soon fell a victim to the coquetries of the dainty little maiden with golden curls and soft brown eyes on the other, and to the mutual satisfaction of the parents a pretty little flirtation went on.

Further up the car on the other side a plump, rosy-cheeked miss of two years, a comfortably clad but evidently poor child, stood against her mother and admiringly watched the pair. At a certain street the mother of the boy signaled to stop. "Kiss the baby," she said, as she stood the little fellow on his feet meaning of course Mice College. feet, meaning of course Miss Golden Hair, and he turned to obey. At that moment, however, the other little girl, making her way out with her mother, was exactly abreast of him, and Master Blue Eyes, finding this little face before him, promptly bestowed a sound-ing, hearty smack upon it. And every-body smiled, while the prince was led out, the beggar maid wonderingly went her way and the disappointed princess, who had leaned forward for the royal salute, buried her face in her mother's cloak, learning thus early in life the bitter truth that the kiss is not always for the one who expects it.

England's Enmity for Russia.

The country most interested in the extinction of the Romanoffs is England.
Owing to the contiguity of their Asiatic possessions the British and Russian governments are irreconcilable foes, and there is no doubt that the stability of British rule in India would be materially augmented by the distribution of the Russian empire, which would certainly follow the annihilation of The attainment of a republican regime at Moscow or St. Peters burg would naturally be followed by struggles for national independence on the part of the Poles, the Little Russians, the Circasians, the Georgians and the inhabitants of the annexed Mussulman khanates in central Asia. Only the strong hand of Alexander III. holds together the widely-separated and un assimilated conquests made by his predecessors during the last hundred W. CLARK RUSSELL.

His Brilliant Career as Sailor, Novelist

No writer in recent'years has so satis Rowher in recent years has so satisfied the youthful fancy for stories of adventure upon the sea as W Clark Russell. Elderly people, too, have enjoyed his stories. Mr. Russell has reversed the usual order of things by being an American by birth and an Englishman by adoution. His mother was lishman by adoption. His mother was a connection of the poet Wadsworth and his father was the author of those old songs: "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," "To the West," and "There's a Good Time Coming." Clark Russell was educated in France. At the age of thirteen he went to sea as a middy in the merchant marine service. He journeyed to Australia, China, India and other parts of His first nautical novel was "John Holdsworth, Chief Mate," pub-lished in 1874. Later he entered journalism as a writer for the Newcastle Chronicle, subsequently going to London, where he became leader writer for the Daily Telegraph. This he abandoned on account of his health and now writes only as he feels impelled to do so, and that in the line of fiction.

KOSSUTH THE PATRIOT.

The Celebrated Hungarian Still Living at the Age of Eighty-Two.

Louis Kossuth, the celebrated Hungarian patriot and statesman, is still living at the ripe age of eighty-two, and is the idol of young Hungarians, who have found in him in times past the bear of Hungarians. the hope of Hungarian liberalism, a man as fearless as he is noble, and who has wielded with equal valor both pen and sword. His old age is peaceful, and that he has done the best for his country that it was possible for him to do.

The Hungary to-day is not the Hungary of times past. The foot of the Austrian is upon the neck of the country, and the great majority of the Czech population is indifferent to the question of national independence. The greatness of Hungary is of the past, and was rather in the men who struggled so valiantly for her redemption than in the nation itself. One cannot hear mentioned the names of Koszciusko, Dealf and Kossuth with-out a thrill of admiration. The Hungarian people have shown, however, little gratitude, and it is safe to say that Tiza, who voluntarily renounced the office of prime minister of Hungary to prevent involving his party supporters in a wordy war with the clergy, and Kossuth, living in the midst of poverty in his grand old age, are not appreciated according to the merits of their past services, but of recent years national feeling in Hungary has been overshadowed by the influence of alien races. Hating with equal virulence both Russia and Germany, in case of European war it is hardly safe to count upon the Hungarian contingent in Austria, who, it is affirmed, would rather trust to a promise of self government from the ezar, than the certainty of Austrian or German rule when the map of Europe shall have been recon-

Wonderful Strength of Fleas.

Fleas are possessed of great strength. Mouffet tells of a mechanic who made a gold chain 5 inches in length which a pet flea could easily drag about on any smooth surface. Bigley writes of a watchmaker on the Strand, London, who had an ivory four-wheeled charlot with a coachman on its box, all of which was drawn with ease by his trained flea, "Dick." The same man afterwards made a carriage with six horses, a coachman, four persons inside, two footmen behind and a postilion on one of the horses, all drawn by a single flea. Latriella mentions a flea which dragged a silver cannon of twenty-four times its own weight, and showed no fear when the tiny piece was charged with gunpowder and fired off. Rene also says that he once saw three fleas drag an omnibus, a pair dragging a chariot and a single one pulling a brass cannon mounted on wheels.

An Insect That Gets Drunk.

Drunkenness is the failing of the Hercules beetle, a South American insect. It sometimes attains a growth of six inches in length. It is said that it rasps the bark from the slender branches of the mammae tree until the juice flows. This it drinks until it drops to the ground intoxicated.

SWIMMING A HORSE. How the Animal Should Be Ridden in the Water.

Pictures are often seen representing horsemen sitting bolt upright in their saddles while swimming their horses across a stream, the whole line of the horses' backs being visible above the water. The artists who make these pictures can hardly have ridden a horse while the animal was swimming or seen the thing done. A French cavalry officer, in a military journal of Paris, the Revue du Cerele Militaire, gives this account of the way a horse should not be ridden, and of the way he should be ridden, in swimming a stream:

To begin with, it must not be supposed that a horse always swims naturally, and with ease, the moment he is off his feet in the water. The animal under such circumstances has but one notion: to keep his head out of the water, and to lift his shoulders as as high as possible.

In doing this, his hind-quarters sink, and he finds himself almost standing upon his tail, or at least in a position three-quarters erect.

In such a position, if the rider draws upon the reins, or throws his body back in the least, the animal's hind quarters will sink more and more, his body will take a vertical position, and, beating the water uselessly with his forefeet, he will finally sink.

As soon as the horse gets off his feet in the water, let the rider grasp a handful of the animal's mane, leaning at the same time well forward upon his shoulders, but without touching the horse's head. The rider's knees should be pressed tightly to the horse's sides; otherwise he is likely to be swept off by the water.

This is the only position which will enable a man to remain in the saddle, and the horse to swim at the same

The reins must be held loosely, and each well to one side. If the horse is to be guided in the water, give the loose rein a little jerk in the direction desired. But it is in the highest de-gree important never to pull on the reins."

TOP-FLOOR AIR.

An Authority Who Says Smoke Smut Is Thickest the Higher One Climbs.

In view of the agitation over "sky-scraping" buildings in Chicago, and the claims of some that high buildings are ssential for pure air, an article in the Pall Mall Gazette on the air of London

At what elevation is the air of London purest? asks the Gazette. According to Mr. W. J. Prim, who gave evidence before the select committee on house of commons ventilation, at about thirty or forty feet from the ground. Lower than that you get the dust, higher than that you get the smoke from the chimneys. Mr. Prim made certain experiments with frames of wood covered with blanketing material put at different elevations—one on the top of the clock tower at Westminster, another on the highest point of the roof, and others at various heights down to the court yard. After five hours' exposure there were found to be more smuts at the high elevations than at the low, but on the court yard there were considerable quantities of dust. On the whole Mr. Prim came to the con-clusion that the purest level was be-tween thirty and forty feet, and that nothing was gained by going higher unless you went very high indeed-say some four hundred or five hundred feet. All this is rather fatal to the common notion that the highest stories of the tallest blocks of flats are especially de-sirable for their salubrious air.

TRUE PHILOSOPHY.

A Story of a Man Who Never Lost His Temper. Madame Neckar relates the following anecdote of M. Abauret, a philosopher of Geneva:

"It was said of him that he never had been out of temper; some persons, by means of his female servant, were de-termined to put this to the proof. The woman in question stated that she had been his servant for thirty years, and she protested that during that time she had never seen him in a passion. They promised vould endeavor to make him angry; she consented, and, knowing he was particularly fond of having his bed well made, she on the day appointed neglected to make it. M. Adauret observed it, and, the next morning, made the observation to her; she answered, that she had forgotten it; she said nothing more, but, on the same evening, she she again neglected to make the bed; the same observation was made on the morrow by the philosopher, and she again made some such excuse, in a cooler manner than before. On the cooler manner than before. On the third day he said to her: 'You have not yet made my bed; you have apparently come to some resolution on the subject, as you probably found it fatigued you. But, after all, it is of no great consequence, as I begin to accustom myself to it as it is.' She threw herself at his feet, and avowed all to him."

Weight of Paper Money.

How many of our readers have eve thought of the weight of a dollar bill? One no doubt has heard it said that it would be impossible for one man to carry away with him one million dol-lars in bills of the one dollar denomination. The fact was shown in the treas-ury at Washington the other day that through the medium of scales of the most delicate adjustment twenty-seven new one-dollar notes weighed exactly as much as a twenty-dollar gold piece. A similar trial was made with old soiled notes, and since these accumulate dirt faster than they wear out, twenty-seven of them weighed considerably more than a double eagle. The actual weight of all the paper money which the treasury sends by express every year to dif-ferent parts of the country is in the aggregate enormous. Since July 1 it has dispatched thirty-eight million dollars, nearly all of it in small notes, to the south and west for the purpose of moving the crops. It would take a good many men to carry that away if in onedollar notes.
